Hi dear!
 How have you been? Five years will have passed for you when you get this letter. So much ~~must~~ will probably change during that time! Is the adult life treating you well? I can't wait to be in your skin, receiving this letter!

Now that we're past the greetings, I've got some things I want to brag about! Since this October, I've been participating in yoga classes and I'm already sensing major improvements of my physical health. Obviously, I'm nowhere near fitness expert level, ~~but~~ but the tensions in my back are long gone. However, though I'd like to maintain the same level of positivity for my other habits, it's hard to do so. I still struggle with overeating (though I'm now replacing the extra sweets with carrots) and my preparation for exams isn't going so well. Regarding this, I try to be gentle with myself and not condemn myself much for my bad habits.

So, Future Me, now that I've shared my journey to being physically and mentally well, did you succeed in achieving the goals I've set for us? Was it challenging for you to maintain a healthy lifestyle? It must have been hard to overcome your procrastination and your fear of public spaces, so I'm proud of you for disciplining yourself! Just so you know, even if you haven't reached mental serenity yet and your gym training routine is on an indefinite hiatus, I still adore you for trying!

No matter what place and mental state you're in now, I hope that this letter motivates you to not give up and continue your journey to greatness! Stay strong!

 With love,
 Your old self
