Task 1.

Task 2.

According to the ~~text~~ text presented ^{in the task}, human pragmatism makes people hide their emotions. So, our words always have a subtext which not everyone understands. But I think it is not exactly the same thing with actors.

On stage, I see a different picture as writers always romanticise things. Generally, the main character is a rebel who is opposed to the society. He does not care about social norms like real people ^{do} and expresses ~~his~~ clearly his feelings. In addition, I am sure it would be difficult for people to read books or watch films if they needed to look for implications ~~all~~ ~~the~~ ~~time~~ all the time.

However, it is impossible to say everything. That is why, the audience can also hear the characters' thoughts ~~and~~ and follow each event of their life. Personally, I feel like a neutral ~~observer~~ observer.

Such position allows people to see a comprehensive picture of reality and understand almost all of the subtext.

All in all, our communication has ~~the~~ much more imperfections than the speech of drama characters which is compensated by their bold words, thoughts aloud and life circumstances presented ~~to~~ to the audience

TB 2: 7 + 8 + 7 + 7 = 29

Task 3.

Reasons for studying abroad

Anna Konik
Moscow, Russia

At the age of globalisation, studying abroad has become ~~more~~ extremely popular. Many countries accept foreign students who want to participate in international programmes. As a member of my school magazine, I have conducted a survey ~~among~~ for a weekly column called "Education today". Bachelor and Master degree students ^{of "Higher School of Social Sciences"} answered questions regarding their ~~the~~ reasons for studying abroad.

~~According to~~

Most popular factors

According to the results of my survey, the main motive is future career prospects which interest 34% of bachelors and 47% of Masters. In fact, many countries around the world provide ~~the~~ opportunities for internships and scientific research. After ~~the~~ defending a thesis, postgraduate students, especially theoreticians, can also be invited to work at ~~the~~ the university. In addition, better understanding of cultural values and biases interests equally both groups. I think it is ~~relevant~~ relevant in the context of close ~~work~~ cooperations between countries. For the same reason, ~~an~~ an almost equal number of respondents appreciate language learning prospects.

~~What~~ What else students find attractive

Comparing Bachelor and Master Degree students, I would like to note that travelling opportunities are more important for postgraduates. They ~~are~~ have already become confident enough and independent of their homes and earned some money to discover the world. In contrast to them, Bachelors ~~are~~ need to mature and develop self-confidence ~~much~~ more (5% and 21% respectively). Undergraduates have just finished school, and they are addicted to their parents, friends and homes. So, it is very important ~~for~~ for them to ~~grow~~ grow and develop.

Future prospects

In conclusion, I would like to emphasise that studying abroad is attractive to ~~many~~ people thanks to career and cultural prospects, and I think each factor from the table will rise in percentage terms in the future because of the development of international exchanges.
