Задание 2. Текст.

Why else should you not trust everything you see online?

Have you ever received a message from a person you haven't seen for ages with text like "Transfer me some money, something bad happened"? Should you believe this person or ask for some additional information?

These days people often communicate with each other via Internet. Everybody uses messages in ~~on~~ social media and people with their own motives use that to reach their own goals.

Sometimes friends send money and don't think they could be fooled. When you receive a message with such text you should think twice before sending anything. It is a common story about Internet hackers who break into personal accounts and text all people from his or her friendlist to help with money. After that they collect money from the naive friends and block them.

Anyway, you should call or arrange a meeting with your friend, who is asking for help, and ask if it's true. Personal problems are very intimate questions which are needed to be discussed offline.

Many hard-working students and teachers of our school are making their first steps to success and our system of individual education always tries to help them on their way. This month our school ^{has} recieved three great achievements.

The pupil Georgy Kosikhin ^{has} won the local competition of young musicians. He had been training for his goal since first grade and even performed his own song which he wrote himself. He has won the main prize and now will be able to visit the national competition.

Our PE teacher Sergey Vinokurov, who is known for his great love for athletics, ^{has} completed his first ~~no~~ 42 km run. He had been training since last summer. Now he is the first person in the city who completed such race.

Anatoliy Rashkin, the biology teacher, the member of local scientific research centre, after three years of hard work finally ^{has} discovered his own sort of strawberries. This sort can bloom all year and have enormous amount of berries. Scientists ~~is~~ decided to give our school some seeds, so the pupils can grow and look after the plants on their own.

Our school is very proud of these people. Huge scientific base and knowledge, that our teachers can provide, give all opportunities to set and achieve your goals, no matter of your age. The school always encourages personal activities.
