Task 2.

Nowadays, everything, from world news to cooking, can be found on the internet. The internet bears a lot of useful information, but that doesn't mean that all of it is right. You were probably told many times to not trust everything you see online, but the question is: why?

Well, there are many examples which show that the internet can be deceitful. Firstly, strangers on social media. Most people there make themselves seem like perfect people when communicating, but if you meet them in real life, their personality will probably digger.

Secondly, you shouldn't believe the news you see. Many people like to spread fake news, and others think that the news are true, thus continuing the cycle.

How can you avoid becoming a victim on the negative side of the internet? You should carefully choose your sources of information and communicate with people you know in real life.

Swaffield School - every month we collect various true-life stories from students, teachers and graduates of our school. The ^{three} most ~~un~~ extraordinary stories get published in our column in the school magazine at the end of the month.

The first story is about Adam Walker, a year-eight student at our school. He was interested in music, yet devoid of talent, but he decided to participate in a music competition, where all the most talented junior musicians gather to seek fame and glory. He tried very hard to achieve victory. And guess what? He won! This shows how hard work overcame natural talent.

The second story is about Mark Taylor, a graduate of our school. He decided to pursue the career of an athlete, so it was only natural that he entered the finals of the ~~the~~ city's yearly marathon. There were a lot of other young people aspiring to be athletes, most of them older and stronger than Mark, so it came as a shock when Mark won! Later, Mark said: "I didn't have much hope of winning, so you should have seen my face when I stood at the top of the podium, a gold medal on my neck."

The last story is about our biology teacher, Mr. Wilson, who attended the local gardening competition. You had to create a salad out of your own grown fruits, yet Mr. Wilson managed to win using only strawberries!

The Case

The ~~kind~~ story is about our biology teacher, Mr. Wilson, who attended the local gardening competition. ~~Our teacher loves plants and has a house in the countryside for gardening.~~ You had to create a salad out of your own grown fruits, yet Mr. Wilson managed to win using only strawberries!

I hope that these stories were interesting for you as they were for us and will motivate you to achieve something equally amazing.
