§3
Robot teachers?

Written by Ian Wright, the source is "The News".

Most people probably think that a robot could never be a doctor or a teacher, but they are wrong, because robots can diagnose illness better than doctors! Anthony Seldon, a British education expert, also thinks that robots can be even better ^{than} humans, because for example, robot teachers can read students' faces and movements. Robot teachers ~~a~~ can't get stressed or tired, which is really great and efficient easy. ~~It's~~ For example, a lot of teachers leave their work because they can't take the pressure, but on the other hand, robot teachers don't have to do that, because they are not humans. I think that we need robot teachers and doctors, because a lot of people can't handle the amount of work that they have to do, but robots can!

I turned into a balloon, ~~which~~ floating in the sky, surrounded by clouds. The sun burned my eyes, but I managed to turn away from it.

Then, I realized, that I was thousands ^{5 of} miles away from the ground! ~~but~~ I screamed: "Help! Help!"

Nobody answered, but the clouds giggled and ~~imitated me~~ ^{imitated me}. Some even laughed! I was twisting and turning, ~~but nobody even noticed!~~ I shook my head, ~~and thought started imagining my parents' worried faces.~~ thinking it was just a bad dream, but then, I noticed a gray, lonely cloud, and decided to talk to him. "Hey, what's wrong? What is your name?" — I asked.

"Cloudy", — the cloud whispered. I tried not to laugh, and when the cloud saw it, he looked ^{upset} ~~very sad~~. "I am ^{so} sorry", — I said.

"It's fine, but don't do that again!" — said Cloudy

I suggested playing some ~~game~~ ^{am} games, and he happily agreed. We played a bit, and Cloudy looked very happy. Then I saw something, which made my blood run cold. "A tornado!" — I yelled.

The tornado was big, even more gray than Cloudy. I tried to fly away, but the tornado was much stronger than me. I closed my eyes, and "boom!" — I popped! The pressure was too much for a balloon to handle. I was horrified, because I have never been

~~I was falling. I was very~~ in a tornado before, but I was now! I was spinning for about an hour, but when the ~~the~~ tornado stopped, I started falling! I was screaming and crying at the same time. I was prepared to die, but luckily, I landed on something soft. ~~The~~ When I opened my eyes, I was in my bed. I wondered what had happened, but my parents interrupted my thoughts. Mom hugged me, saying I was in a coma for a few days! Then, my dad gave me a ^{gray} puppy. It had a collar, and his name ^{was} "Cloudy"! I cried with happy tears, and hugged Cloudy. I realized, that friends are a true gift from God, and we need to thank him for that.

Characters: cloud, me

chain of events:

I turned into a balloon, floating ~~on a~~ in the clouds, found a friend cloud, asked him ~~who~~ who was he and why was he sad. He said: "I am lonely and I have no friends." ~~Wh~~ I suggest being his friend. He agrees. Then, a tornado is coming our way, and it sucks us in and we stick like that for an hour. I pop, and the cloud disappears into thin air. I fall on the ground, and it starts to rain. I realize that the cloud is

I become human (again) and the cloud turns into a dog. I adopt him, and the "cloud" becomes my pet.
