~~это задание~~Task 1

CEBDA

Task 2

- 1) Are many teachers quitting their job? +
- 2) Who thinks robots will replace human teachers? +
- 3) Robots are better than humans at some jobs, aren't they? +
- 4) Do teachers stop working in their field because they feel overworked or because robots take ~~the~~ their place? +
- 5) Why is there a possibility for robots to become teachers' helpers? +

Task 3

The article "Robot Teachers?" by Ian Wright published in "The News" questions whether robots can replace humans in different fields.

First, it states that robots can easily do manual labour, but there is debate on whether they have a place in fields demanding creativity and empathy. Anthony Seldon, who is an education expert, thinks teachers will become mere assistants to robots by 2027. While it does not seem plausible, ~~human~~ robots can substitute teachers in areas where there is a lack of them and fix the issue of teachers being overworked by dealing with homework and reports.

In my opinion, robots can never replace teachers as one of their main goals is to inspire students and robots lack the human emotions that make reaching this goal possible. Plus, the Internet already contains information on every ~~top~~ topic imaginable but the demand for teachers stays high.

Task 4

I suddenly turned into a balloon, flying across the blue sky. I heard Julie yell and run after me. Luckily, she managed to catch me by the string and tie it to her wrist.

"Who would have thought such a handsome prince ~~or~~ would turn into such an ugly balloon," she mumbled, as she continued walking through the forest.

As I flew over her head, bumping into branches, I could only think. Once again, I marveled at the stupidity of the magician who cursed me. Turning into a random object every day for an hour or two made my life more difficult, but the same could be said about the magician: he was now a wanted man on all the Mist Islands. What was even the point of cursing everyone who offered their hand in marriage to Princess Anna? Surely, the fairest girl of all Rainland could not ~~be~~ like dark magic and cruelty.

Yet here I was the only heir to the throne, looking for a witch who might be able to lift the curse, accompanied only by my faithful knight, Julie.

The hour soon passed and I turned back, falling on the ground. Julie helped me up and pushed me back, shielding me from something.

"Julie, it's just a fairy stuck in the grass."

"They are all deadly poisonous!"

"I am not leaving her here," I slowly outstretched

my hand and freed the fairy. ~~It chir~~ She chirped happily and waved ~~her~~ offering us to follow her. She led us straight to the ~~same~~ witch cawn on which the witch's house stood.

The ~~do~~ The witch emerged from the house. She was tall and pale, her dark curly hair looking like a cloud. She wore a green skirt that reached her ankles, a shawl drooped from her shoulders. Her eyes were purple and glowing and when she started speaking, I could see her huge, white teeth.

"Who dares to disturb me? Oh, Lily!" the anger vanished from her face when she saw the fairy. The fairy said something, and the witch smiled.

"You are a kind soul, aren't you, Sebastian?" For ~~freeing~~ ^{helping} Lily, I will give you the ring that will free you from your curse.

An angry, clear voice came from behind the house. "You won't believe it! He cursed another prince! I swear, I am ready to marry a peasant to make him leave me alone!"

I immediately recognised Princess Anna as she came up to us. She was wearing a simple hunter's outfit, but it only made her prettier.

"Is that the prince you are talking about?" the witch inquired.

"Yes! Sebastian, are you alright?"

"I am now, thanks to her."

"Great! Can you officiate our marriage?" Anna turned to the witch. "The knight and Lily can be witnesses!"

"Are you sure Anna?" I interrupted.

"I want to get rid of the magician, and you already proposed to me," she shrugged. It was a beautiful wedding. Lily's siblings served us dinner and the witch made the fire burn in different colors.

Of course, our parents were displeased to find out we married like that, and so was the magician. Yet, our marriage ensured the alliance of our kingdoms; finally, there was peace.

Of course, ~~there was a scandal~~ our we married like this, and so was the magician. Yet, ~~it was a hopeful start:~~ our marriage provided an alliance between our kingdoms ~~and Anna was no longer~~

~~stated finally~~ and it was finally peace.

She was interrupted by an angry, clear

Wonderful! Please, please, can you officiate?

I looked over her shoulder. ~~It was~~ There was a fairy - a small, glowing creature, whose wings got tangled in the grass.

~~Julie, come so~~ "Julie, are you serious? It's just a fairy."
 "Yes, and all of them are deadly poisonous."

"Well!" I knelt and slowly outstretched my hand. ~~I am very lucky to have them~~ "That just means that I'm lucky to have my mist magic. And you aren't going to bite are you?"
 The fairy hissed. ~~I let mist~~ I ~~made~~ the mist emerge summoned the mist, making it ~~dark~~ a cloud ~~the vision~~ the fairy's vision, ~~which~~ which let me free the fairy. It seemed to ~~be~~ have. It changed its mind, holding on my hand tightly and vibrating instead of flying away.

"See? It likes me. ~~And I heard that~~ And it's just what we need to ward off the ~~forest~~ forest lights the forest phantoms." Julie had nothing to say to that. The fairy was very useful, indeed. Somehow, it seemed to know what we were looking for as it lead us straight to the witch's house.

The door opened, and the witch emerged from the house. She was tall and pale, her curly black hair looking like a ~~dark~~ storm cloud. She wore a long green skirt that reached her ankles; a shawl draped from her shoulders. Her eyes ~~she~~ were purple and glowing, and when she started speaking I could see her huge white teeth.

"Who dares to disturb me?" I smell human flesh! Who dares to disturb me? ~~Oh Lily~~ "Oh, Lily!" the anger vanished from the witch's face as she saw the fairy. It immediately flew around me, ~~blizz~~ ~~the excitedly~~ off my shoulder and started ~~speaking~~ speaking to the witch.

I suddenly turned into a balloon, flying across the blue sky. ~~My friend,~~ I heard Julie ~~chase~~ and unfold her wings. Somehow, I could still see her, despite being a balloon. She caught me by the string and slowly landed.

"You are a ~~very~~ balloon, do you know that?" she huffed. I could not respond, so she tied me to her wrist and continued ~~moving~~ walking through the forest. ~~The hour I spent~~ It was contemplation hour - the hour I spent in the form of a random object. The thing about curses is that they are way more ridiculous than anyone expects. The magician who cursed me must have lost his mind: what is the point of cursing someone who sees the point of cursing someone? The magician who cursed me must have been rather stupid: what is the point of cursing everyone who offers their hand in marriage to Princess Anna? It is highly unlikely that a Princess might make one more attractive ~~attracting~~ ~~people~~ dark magic can ~~make~~ ~~one~~ ~~seem~~ ~~or~~ ~~gill~~ ~~more~~ ~~better~~ ~~and~~ ~~attract~~ the fairest Princess in the ~~island~~ ~~like~~ all the Rainland.
